As patriotism is then both a delight, and treason and rebellion condemned as equally sinful and shameful by every system of religion and every system of law, by the reason and instincts of mankind, whence are civil wars, and whence especialty came ours?

Oftener in governments where the sovereignty is hereditary came ours?

Oftener in governments where the sovereignty is hereditary came ours?

Oftener in governments where the sovereignty is hereditary came ours?

Oftener in governments where the sovereignty is hereditary and espoists, oppressed and burdened people, and easy of the state of the arbitrament of any and despoists, oppressed and burdened propletions revolt against tyrannies, too severe roof painul for long endurance; and revolution becomes the last resort and remedy for men who love likerty better than life.

But the rebellion of the Confederate states in 1861 was of a different class. It was not a war of faction, supporting rival claimants to an efficial succession, both acknowledging the legitimacy of the institutions of government; her was it an attempted evolution in behalf of right against power. It was, on the contrary, a determined and desperate struggle, not merely to overthrow a government, but to destroy the nationality represented by it.

The conspiracy which found in it it is culmination was an old one, and at first unconscious of its true nature and direction. Its germ appeared in the opposition eveloped to the original adoption of national institutions as formulated in the federal constitution. It appeared soon after in the Virginia and Kentucky resolutions of '98 imputed to Jefferson, but which were hardly consistent with that theory of national sovereignty upon which he must have relied for a conviction of treason against Aaron Burr; it was revived in the doctrine of multification, as defended by Callioun and he school, leading logically to the land, and Abread, it establishes our place as one in the world's family of independent, equal and sovereign nations. At home, within the sphere of its prescribed powers, and determining their limits and applications, without responsibility to any superior, it acts upon the individual people whose allegiance it commands, with the irresistible whose allegiance it commands, with the irresistible whose allegiance it commands, with the irresistible whose allegiance it commands, with the resistible people. It is the result and exponent—the consequence rather than the cause—of those common features and characteristics which belong to use one people living it one land, which, in the aggregate, constitute a national character, the development of which, in social and political action, represents in history.

aggregate, constitute a national character, the development of which, in social and politica action, represents in history

OUR NATIONAL LIPE AND SPIRIT.

It is the ideal of all patriotic aspiration; the inspiration and object of our public hopes; the shield of our security; the guardian of our persons and rights; the defender of our interests; our present help in every time of earthly need. The sway of its law is the bond of our peace and the pledge of our present justification of the state of the state of the state of the same of earthly need. The sway of its law is the bond of our peace and the pledge of our presperity; the supremacy of its authority, the condition among all the possible conflicts and jealousies of subordinate political agencies; its flag—"the banner of beauty and glory"—the symbol of our power and pride, the emblem of our minty, the imperial standard of our joyal and reverent devotton.

It is not inconsistent with this spirit to value and cherish the local attachments which connect us with the states of our nativity and abode, but only in an inferior and subordinate degree. Our first duty and our chief love are are due to the Nation, which alone constitutes our country. For the principal value of our citizenship of the state is that it confers upon us the dignity and privilege of our nativality.

In contempt of this view of our constitutional organization as a nation, the opposing theory was taught of the supremacy of the states, the subordination of the union. According to this doctrine the only sources and supports of political authority known in our system were the states, while the federal government, under its constitution, was merely a mode of their agency. Of course, upon such a construction of which, as citizens, we were capable, consisted in allegiance to the state of our donical; for loyalty is the expression of featity to a person, either mitural or political: it can not be exacted or yield.

tural or political; it can not be exacted or yielded to an inaminate perciment or compact—so that the obligations of the federal constitution cease to bind individuals who were released from the duty of obedience by the sovereign authority of their states; and the states themselves could not be made responsible, for they had no political superiors. Hence it was thought at the time by some public men that there was no constitutional warrant to attempt the coercion of the states, and writers, in that interest, dominate the rebellion against the National Government as a war between states.

And founding upon this false interpretation of the constitutional facts of our history the national life was assailed in of the constitutional facts of our history the national file was assailed in Ordanizzp AND BLOODY WAR.

It is not to be supposed, however, that the inspiring purpose and main motive of the rebeling and the constitution of the aspect of the states. That theory was used as the legal excuse and justification of the aspected right to renounce the authority of the federal constitution, but the right was not exercised merely to assert its existence. There were unterior objects and purposes which enlisted the sympathies and united the efforts not merely of states, but of a section, and that without regard to state lines and even in disobedhence of state authority. Such was notably the case of some distinguished public men and thousands of others in states which never, by any act of secession, sanctioned or justified their course, who broke their allegiance of both state and nation to swell the ranks of the rebellon, to adhere to the confederate government, or to give it and and comfort.

Accordingly, we find powerful interests, participate the pecuniary, partly political, pervading a section of the country, which organized and arrayed its public sentiment to eradicate every seed of dissent within it, and to defend itself against every hostility from without. These interests, it is needless to say, all grew out of the institution of negro slavery. They intenched themselves early behind the ramparts of state sovereignty and supremacy. Upon this basis was founded the political power of the slaveholding interest, known in our history as the slave power.

founded the political power of the siavehold-ing interest, known in our history as the slave power.

One of its most signal struggies with the national spirit was upon the question of tariif duties levide with a discrimination in favor of American manufactures. It was supposed that, as to all its principal products except sugar, slave labor would be rendered more profitable to its owners, by free access to the markets of Leverd, in direct exchange for foreign manufactures, and that a discriminating duty against foreign burses was a tax levied on their produce the profit of the control of the foreign the profit of the size of the control of the revenue laws, through state authority, and under the banner of nullification, dealed and defied the national authority, dealed and defied the national authority. This however were a preparatised.

thority, This, however, was a mere episode. It was an incidental illustration of a more general fact, which soon began to become manifest, and which eventuated in civil war. It was that the continued existence of slavery was incompatible with the permanence of national institutions. The exigencies of the slave-holding interest demanded sacrinces which could only be made at the expense and by the ultimate extinction of

In place of one, and separating us so widely in thought, feeling, culture, and every constituent of character and motive of conduct as to make any mere joiltical bond of ution a name without reality. It was more disintegrating than if it had succeeded in teaching the two sections different languages; because, with apparent continued use of but one, it had introduced such a confusion of thought as to make their communication incomprehensible. Their ideas were not capable of mutual translation. What to one was good, was to the other cell, and contradiction and mutual exclusion was substituted for the fellowship of sympathy and a community of aims and purposes. The immortal declaration of our national independence, which had been supposed to be founded upen eternal, unchangeable and indestructible truths of reason, and to formulate the justification of human right for all mankind had become the subject of derision as a series of sophisms and giltering generalitions, while the national constitution with the glosses which had been imposed upon its practical construction, was demounced, on the other hand, as a "The part with death and a league with hell." The part with death and a league with hell. The part was demounced, on the other hand, as a "The part with death and a league with hell." The sole condition on which it tolerated political association was the recognition of its right of domination. Its alternative was rule or ruin. So that when it was driven from the seat of national power by a political revolution, wought by public sentiment and in strict accordance with law, without waiting for any overt act of hostility, with desperate foresight of its inevitable doom, it plunged into the dread abyse—"Hurled headlons flaming from the etheral sky. With hideous ruin and combustion, down To bottemiese perdition."

Under the mocking banner of state rights, it opened its cannon upon the national power, and when summer fell, it buried forever under its ruins the lost cause of a confederacy, of which shavery was proclaimed to be the corner stone. It was a victory, not only for the nation, but for manishind, and marks a step in the progress of the race that cannot and will not be reversed.

Those who were overcome in the conflict, as well as those who overcame them, can unite, without bitterness or hypocrisy, in a triumph that divides the trophies of its good equality with both. horizontal section of elliptical shape, about is feet in height, on which there are decorations and tablets, also of bronze, representing the badge of the Society of the Army of the Cuberiand, partly surrounded by a wreath of the Gen. Thomas is represented as having suddenly checked his horse on the sumant or a slight acclivity to make an observation, and estimated the sits with loosened rein and hat off, surveying the field with searching eve. The horse looks abroad with head raised high in the air, swelting neck and chest, and fore feet firmly planted on a strip of rock. His mane and uplinted tail are tossed by the wind, and one of his hind feet on the slope is placed before the other. Rider and steed are erect and eager at the first view, and full of the glow caused by the quick ride up the ascent. The former sits easily, firmly and straight, leaning slightly backward with the action of the horse and in his effort to get the furthest possible horizon. With his left hand he holds the rein, while in his right, hanging down to the saddle-cloth, are his army slouch hat and gloves. His double-breasted military trock coat is buttoned to the chin and fits easily, giving picturesque and well-managed folds. The skirts fall ever his right leg and are blown back on to his left thigh. His plain riding-boots rest in open stirrups, and his sword hangs on his left side. The general is free in his saddle and in trim for active work. The face of Gen. Thomas is expressive, and the head well modled. The intent expression, as he looks with firmly compressed Jaw, and with that intense interest which imparts earnestness to the entire figure, is well rendered. The figure of the horse is especially good anatomically, and has careful veining. About six months ago be completed the design in plaster and sent it to the foundry of Mossys. Bureau Brothers & Heaton, of Philadelphia, who received $10,000 for their labor. This firm cast the statues of Generals Scott, McPherson, Greene, Rawlins and Gov. Clinton. of New York, now in this city. The entire weight of the Statue is about 7,300 pounds—the horse and rider weighing 5,300 and the base 2,200.

THE SITE

Selected for the statue is the spot where the salute of eight hundred guns was fired on April 3, 1865, in honor of the fall of Petersburg and capture of Richmond, and one week later another salute of eight hundred guns, in honor of the surrender of Lev's army. The statue faces south, the line of vision being directly toward Arlington, the home of Gen. Lee.

Princess Louise Attending to Business.

Toronto, Ont., Nov. 19.—A special cable from London to the Globe says:—There is reason to believe that the return of Princess Louise to England is not entirely a matter of pleasure, but is attributable in a large extent to the interest she takes in the furnishing of a company for the development and colonization of lands in Manitoba and the territory abbutting on Lake Winnipeg. An association has already been formed for this purpose under the title of "Lake Winnipeg Land and Colonization Association." Lord Walter Campbell is one of the directors of this company. The prospectus gives a few details of the enterprise. The price at which Manitoba grown wheat is to be landed at Liverpool is 35 shillings per quarter.

Endorsement of the French Government.—It is a matter of pride to Rochester, N. Y., as well as to the firm directly interested, that yesterday a cable dispatch was received, stating that the French government had adopted the tobaceo and cigarettes manufactured by Wm. S. Kimball & Co., of that city. It should be explained, perhaps, that all tobacco sold in France up to this time has been manufactured by the government, of late the demand for other makes has arisen, and the government, io meet it, allowed Engsish and American manufacturers to enter goods for competitive test, with a view to the adoption of the best. The fact that wm. S. Kimball & Co. have coine out far ahead of all other manufacturers in both countries is unmistakable proof that their goods are the best the world produces. Their tobacco and cigarettes will henceforth be on sale in Paris as frequents will henceforth be on sale in Paris as frequents will henceforth be on sale in In other words, the French government, on the report of its experts, declares the Venity Fair fobacco and cigarettes of Wm. S. Kimball & Co. the best in WCLUBRING A COLORED "DEET PAYER"—On perts, declares the Venity Fair tobacco and cigarettes of Wm. S. Kimball & Co. the best in the world!

"CLUBBING" A COLORED "DEET PAYER"—On Saturday night last a large party of disguised negroes made a cowardly attack upon the house of a colored man named Willian Taylor, in the lower part of this county, with the avowed purpose of "clubbing" T. J. Comodore, a colored school teacher, who beards with Taylor, and who had canvassed this district in the interest of the debt payers. It seems that Taylor and Comodore are both men of nerve and resolution, and, fortunately, having a musket in the house, they succeeded in keeping the party at bay by firing into them. Being thwarted in their enceavor to get comodore into their possession these violent men then vented their rage by tearing down the fences and destroying the standing crop of corn as far as in their power lay. Comodore is a quiet and well-behaved citizen, and a man of considerable intelligence, the is, and has always been, a pronounced republican; but he has incurred the displeasure of the innorant and misguided blacks in his community by the courageous fight which he made against the readjusters in the late election.—
